CRASH SENDS TWO OVER THE EDGE

Two members of the Monterey County Sheriff's search and rescue team lifted one victim to safety. The 25-year-old man was treated at Community Hospital for moderate injuries sustained when the car he was in tumbled 250 feet down a steep Big Sur hillside.

Carmel paramedic David Jedinak, right, and fellow rescuer Chris Hubbard listened as William Payne described his injuries. Jedinak and paramedic Graham Evans were the first to reach two men, their pit bull and their crumpled Honda.

Protective pit bull complicates Big Sur rescue

TWO BIG Sur men were lucky to escape with their lives Monday afternoon after their Honda took a 250-foot plunge off Highway 1 onto a rocky area of Garrapata State Beach.

William Payne and Anthony Sloan, both 25 and transient, were driving northbound on the scenic highway about 1:30 p.m. when the accident occurred. As a Land Rover two cars in front of them slowed to turn left onto a lookout, the van directly ahead cut to the right to go around it. Perhaps intending to pass the van, Sloan pulled his 1987 Honda to the left and accelerated, collided with the Land Rover and careened down the steep hillside, according to

Another P.B. homeowner sues coastal commission

Twin court fights over dune habitat

By PAUL MILLER

JUST ONE month after a Monterey County judge rebuffed its effort to impose a $6,000-a-day fine on a 17 Mile Drive homeowner for having a mini-golf course in his front yard, the California Coastal Commission was sued by a neighboring property owner who claims the commission is unfairly restricting his plans for a new home.

"I think the commission is way out of bounds in their requirements," said Murray Smith, who filed his claim against the commission in Monterey County Superior Court Nov. 6. "I wish more people would sue the coastal commission to bring them to their senses."

Smith and his wife, Carol, own a dilapidated, 1,200-square-foot beach cottage on the inland side of the world-famous scenic road between Cypress Point and Point Joe. In the summer of 2002, Monterey County approved their plans to replace the old home with a new one about four times as large — in keeping with the average home size in the neighborhood, according to Smith's lawsuit.

But a year later, the coastal commission's staff argued Smith shouldn't be allowed to tear down the old home on his property because it was designed by a protégé of Frank Lloyd Wright in an inexpensive style pioneered by Wright in the 1930s to help provide affordable housing.

In September, the commission decided the house could go but told Smith he had to limit his new development to the

The craftsman who gave Mission its color

By ANNE PAPINEAU

WILLIAM GEORGE Ingram passed on more than his genes and business sense to his children. He also imparted to his six sons and three daughters a deep appreciation of music, animals, family and the beauty of Carmel Valley.

Mr. Ingram, a resident of Meadows Road in Carmel Valley for 50 years and the fourth generation member of his family to pursue the craft of plastering — his work is memorialized around the Monterey Peninsula, including in the Carmel Mission Basilica — died Nov. 10. He was 80.

"My parents did a great job of providing a good childhood for all of us," recalled his daughter, Marjorie Ingram Viales. "We moved four miles out in the sticks to Carmel Valley in 1953. We had hay bales in the front yard and strawberries in the back. We built hay bale forts, and raised

THIEVES, WORKING IN TEAMS, GRAB $25K IN ARMANI SUITS, SCULPTURE

By MARY BROWNFIELD

TEN ARMANI suits worth nearly $15,000 and a $10,000 acrylic sculpture were stolen by organized teams of crooks operating in Carmel over the last two weeks, according to police.

The designer three-piece suits disappeared from Saks Fifth Avenue in Carmel Plaza in early November. Low resolution surveillance tape suggests they were taken by a three-person team of thieves, Carmel Police Sgt. Pete Poitras said.

The theft occurred sometime between 6 p.m. Nov. 6 and 10:30 a.m. two days later, when the men's department manager noticed the expensive suits were missing from the rack.

"He recalled there were 17 on the rack, so he did some checking and it took a few days to determine they had not been sold or moved," Poitras said. Saks reported the theft to police Nov. 13.

A Saks security official reviewed video surveillance tapes and spotted what he believed to be a heist in progress

"It appears the typical distraction-theft scenario unfolds, and one of the suspects is seen entering and leaving three times in rapid succession with a shopping bag," Poitras said. "He goes in the direction of the suits and leaves, carrying a bag each time, while the other two appear to be engaging the sales personnel."

Poitras said he has not seen the tape, but the Saks employee's conclusion "seems fairly likely based on the security person's years of experience observing this type of thing."

Two men and one woman appear on the tape, but the quality makes it unlikely they'll be caught and arrested.

"We won't actually be able to identify the subjects from it, nor say definitively that they are doing the theft," Poitras said.

Two female suspects

Also employing the tried-and-true M.O. of distraction, thieves stole a $9,800 acrylic sculpture from a San Carlos Street art gallery Nov. 7.

Two women in their 40s entered Simic European Gallery around 6 p.m. Friday, and one began a conversation with employee Barbara Frasier just around the corner from a large acrylic piece set on a pedestal near the front door, according to Carmel Police Detective Buck Melton.

The next thing she knew, the women — and the sculpture by Michael Wilkinson entitled, "Haven III: Covenant" —

Counterfeit vendors beware

By REGAN CAREY

A VENDOR who sold counterfeit sunglasses at the Monterey County Fair in August was fined $2,500 last week after an investigation by the district attorney.

Muhammad Anwar, who came into town with the fair, set up shop selling, among other things, fake Oakley sunglasses. Deputy District Attorney Steven Holett said an investigator at the fair noted Anwar's goods and was suspicious. A counterfeiting expert happened to be in town and determined Anwar's Oakleys were, indeed, fakes.

On the last night of the fair, officials from the D.A.'s office confiscated all of Anwar's goods and cited him for a misdemeanor. Anwar claimed it was his first time selling counterfeits, which he had purchased at a swap meet in Northern California, and said he didn't know what he was doing was wrong, Holett said. A Nov. 12 judgment ordered him to pay a $2,500 fine and keep a record of every name-brand item he purchases for the next three years.

According to Holett, the D.A.'s office watches for counterfeiting and lately has seen an increase in knock-off ladies handbags. He cited an investigation by the NBC news program, "Dateline," that traced counterfeiting operations to terrorist groups as the reason for the county's aggressiveness in prosecuting counterfeit vendors. He also aims to protect businesses that sell authentic

Commission OKs illegal bedroom, bathroom — for now

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A CRESPI Lane couple trying to get their daughter back on her feet should be cut some slack, the planning commission unanimously decided Nov. 12.

Commissioners granted Sandhya and Ramesh Kolar a temporary use permit for the garage they illegally converted into a bedroom, but the Kolars must still obtain an OK from the water district for the unpermitted bathroom.

Principal planner Brian Roseth told the commission the converted garage did not fit anywhere in the city code, so he developed a temporary permit. The code permits guest houses on lots greater than 6,000 square feet as long as off-street parking is provided. A temporary hardship-induced secondary residence, which usually includes a kitchen, can be built on a lot of any size, but must also have parking.

"When I was working my way through the analysis of this, I didn't even know what to call it" or how to post a notice for it, Roseth said.

He suggested that the commission could allow the garage-turned-bedroom to remain for no more than two years, provided the Kolars obtain a permit from the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District without any debit from the city's water allocation.

"I admit this is an unusual solution to an unusual situation," he said. "The planning commission has to think about the ramifications."

The Kolars explained they converted the garage in order to shelter their daughter, recently returned from an 11-year stay in an ashram overseas, while she gets reacquainted with the outside world.

"We are solely providing her support until she can finish school, regain her health and support herself," they wrote.

The Kolars' illegal bedroom first came to the planning department's attention last December when building official Tim Meroney received a complaint. He inspected the garage and found the bathroom and bedroom had been constructed without permits sometime after the garage was rebuilt in 1999. He notified the water district of the illegal hookups.

The Kolars and city staff spent the past eight months attempting to resolve the issue and in the end, "it was agreed they would seek approval of a temporary use permit for a guest house."

During the hearing, Sandhya Kolar pleaded her daughter's case.

"She needs our support, financially and very much emotionally," she said. "This is safe. She's been in an environment where it was very difficult for her to reenter the world."

Guest house = no harmony?

But maintaining the guest house means the Kolars will continue to park their three cars on the street, according to petitions signed by 12 neighbors, none of whom spoke at the hearing.

"It is therefore our contention that if we are all to live in harmony on our once quiet street that this proposed guest house be disallowed," the petitions read.

The petitions also accused the Kolars of operating a business out of their home, but Roseth cautioned the planning commission to ignore that comment as it had nothing to do with the residential land-use question at hand.

Commissioner Mike Cunningham worried the Kolars were finding it easier to ask for forgiveness than for permission and suggested approving the temporary permit might set a precedent, but chairman Bill Strid said the commission would simply be delaying an inevitable enforcement action.

"Instead of making it take place immediately, we are allowing a gratis period due to the hardship," he said. "If it were an enforcement action without hardship, it would be enacted immediately."

Commissioner Robin Wilson, who moved approval of the temporary permit, said denying it would set a worse precedent.

"The only precedent we're setting here is that this city is responsive to hardship when it can be," he said. "If a family

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Contacted a resident at Rio and Ladera in reference to tree laborers pruning trees on his property to see if he obtained the necessary permits. He said he contacted the city forester last week and claimed he was aware of the work being done. He was not cutting or pruning trees on city property. Advised this information will be passed onto the city forester. It appeared the work being done did not need a permit since he was pruning small branches from the tops of trees on his property.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: While on foot patrol observed a female stumbling by her vehicle as she was attempting to unlock the driver's door. When contacted, she was unsteady on her feet and had a strong smell of an alcoholic beverage upon her breath and person. Based on the above objective symptoms, she was unable to drive her vehicle. She provided her home address and agreed to a ride home. Her vehicle was locked and secured at Dolores and Fifth.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Yellow Cab taxi driver brought a passenger from Seaside to Lobos and Third. Subject said he was going to get some money from his mother but never came back. Subject disappeared after going through the side gate at the residence located at Lobos and Third. No answer at the residence, which appeared to be unoccupied.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Male came to the station to report a verbal argument he was in and threats being made. This dispute involved a longtime acquaintance and he wanted advice on how to handle the situation. He was advised that a letter explaining the situation might be a way to handle this to avoid a heated conversation. He was advised to contact the department if he needed further assistance.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Male reported suspicious circumstances concerning water left running at his residence at San Antonio and Fourth. He received a water bill of approximately $2,000. He was notified by the gardener that the water was found on when they came to care for the lawn. There is no explanation of who or how the water was left on for that long of a period.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Male reported finding a small sealed baggie containing a small amount of a white powdery substance on the ground at Dolores and First. He left the substance on the ground for retrieval by CPD, which responded and took possession of the substance. The substance was later tested at the department with an NIK drug test kit and found to be methamphetamine. It was placed into DOJ evidence bag and marked for destruction.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Male requested a civil standby at Torres and First while he had a female's vehicle towed from the street to a private parking lot at his business at Dolores and Seventh. The vehicle was towed with no further action needed.

Early-rising rooster captured at last

By REGAN CAREY

THE ROOSTER that took up residence in a redwood tree at Lincoln and Fourth three weeks ago — bringing 4 a.m. wakeup calls to dozens of residents — was finally captured Tuesday.

Animal Control Officer Cindi Mitchell set a cat-sized trap for the bird with cracked corn as bait after being notified of the rooster's presence Nov. 1. Mitchell finally succeeded in capturing the bird this week when she set the trap in a new location — a patio on Monte Verde near Fourth where the rooster had been hanging out.

The SPCA told Carmel P.D. it didn't have room for the bird. But one of the residents of the rooster's neighborhood, Linda Smith, asked the owner of Hacienda Hay and Feed on Carmel Valley Road if he could take the bird dubbed Pavarotti — since his early morning arias wouldn't bother anybody there — and he agreed. Smith took the rooster to its new home Tuesday afternoon.

While residents are surely grateful they no longer have to deal with predawn crowing, Mitchell said most people she spoke with were concerned about the rooster rather than annoyed.

Now that he is safe and has a home, people can breathe — and sleep — easier.

Awakening unwilling residents at 4 a.m. isn't a felony, but this renegade rooster ended up a jailbird after being caught by savvy animal control officer Cindi Mitchell this week.

Energy bill compromise undercuts Cal-Am MTBE claim

By PAUL MILLER

WHEN THE congressional sponsors of an important energy bill revealed the its latest version Saturday, it contained a surprise provision that would undercut Cal-Am's lawsuit against big oil companies over MTBE pollution of groundwater.

The compromise law, approved by the House of Representatives Tuesday and now before the U.S. Senate, would give MTBE producers immunity from product liability lawsuits filed after Sept. 5. Cal-Am's suit, alleging oil company liability for possible pollution of hundreds of wells in California, was filed in Monterey County Superior Court Sept. 30. More than 100 similar suits around the country would also be affected by the new cutoff date, according to the New York Times.

Representatives from states where MTBE is produced, including House majority leader Tom DeLay of Texas, pushed for the immunity clause because oil companies were encouraged by federal law beginning in the early 1990s to add MTBE to gasoline as a way of cutting air pollution. Those legislators gained crucial support by making a deal with corn-belt legislators, including Sen. Tom Daschle, the South Dakota Democrat, to replace MTBE with ethanol, which is made from corn. Under the bill, more than 5 billion gallons of ethanol would be used annually by 2012, according to Daschle's office.

Cal-Am said its suit was filed to protect ratepayers from the cost of expensive MTBE cleanups in the future. So far, just one local well, a half-mile upstream from the Schulte Road bridge in Carmel Valley, has shown any MTBE contamination — and that is at a level well below clean water limits, the company maintained.

Judge sentences drunken driver who assaulted cop with his car

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE SEASIDE man who tried to run over a California Highway Patrol officer while driving drunk in downtown Carmel last May was sentenced last week to one year in county jail and five years felony probation, according to deputy district attorney Robert Burlison. Seaside resident Gerardo Garcia was convicted of felony assault on a CHP officer with a vehicle and driving under the influence.

Garcia pleaded guilty Sept. 30, four months after he was arrested May 25, when he led police on a chase from Marina into crowded downtown Carmel. At one point, he stopped his Cadillac and CHP motorcycle officer Pete Sisson, who had been pursuing him, came to a halt behind him and dismounted. Garcia then threw the car in reverse, prompting Sisson to fire several rounds at Garcia to stop the suspect from backing over him. Unharmed, the suspect fled again and crashed into an Ocean Avenue median. Officers drew their guns, surrounded the car and ordered Garcia to exit the car, eventually sending in a police K-9 to force him out.

Police discovered he had a blood alcohol content of .21 percent — more than twice the legal limit. He has been in jail since his arrest, and on Nov. 10 Monterey County Superior Court Judge Gary Meyer sentenced Garcia to jail time and probation, including a requirement that he not reenter the country illegally if deported. His drivers license was suspended for four years.

As is the case whenever an officer is involved in a shooting, Sisson's actions were reviewed by the D.A.'s office, which ruled the 15-year CHP veteran was justified in using his revolver, according to CHP Officer Richard Richards.

Peninsulans mobilize to clear Cambodian land mines

By PAUL MILLER

A GLITTERING gathering at Tehama Golf Club last weekend had a sober purpose: To help a local group, Freedom Fields USA, raise enough money to clear Battambang Province in Cambodia of thousands of land mines left behind by the murderous Khmer Rouge.

With movie stars Clint Eastwood, Sean Penn and Robin Wright Penn on hand, almost 200 people donated $150,000 to get the project under way.

"A mine that was buried for less than $3 costs $100 to remove," said Freedom Fields USA President Mia Hamwey of Carmel. "More than five people a month are killed or injured by mines in one small district."

She became interested in the cause last year after her sister, Kara Bue, a Deputy Assistant Secretary of State, told her of the terrible effects land mines have on innocent civilians around the world. In January, with the help of a board of 12 concerned locals, Freedom Fields USA was born.

Saturday night's featured speaker was Richard Armitage, number two in the State Department under Colin Powell. He told the group there are 50 million land mines imperiling people in 60 countries. "But what that devastating math doesn't account for is the associated cost in land that can't be used, roads that can't be traveled and people who are psychologically and physically scarred for life," he said.

Ken Rutherford, Ph.D., who lost both legs to a land mine in Somalia in 1993, also appealed for more international action to clear mines from old battlefields.

For more info about the land mine project of Freedom Fields USA, go to www.freedomfieldsusa.org.

PHOTOS/ALLI WOOD, REG REGALADO

At the land mine event, actor Sean Penn was flanked by Armitage and former Carmel Mayor Clint Eastwood, who hosted the evening with his wife, Dina. Penn has been touted as a candidate for Best Actor Oscar for his work in Eastwood's new movie, "Mystic River." He was accompanied by his wife, Robin Wright Penn.

Recycled water project expansion not OK yet

By MARY BROWNFIELD

DURING A four-hour hearing attended by more attorneys than most trials, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board of directors this week picked its way through the ordinance and environmental study for an expansion of a recycled water project in Pebble Beach.

Although the hearing was for the second reading of the law permitting the Pebble Beach Company to fund the $22 million expansion by selling 365 acre-feet of water entitlements to owners of 2,790 developed lots and 137 vacant properties in Del Monte Forest, the board delayed final adoption until Nov. 24. The proposal was submitted to the board more than two years ago.

Monday night, as lame duck director Molly Erickson began suggesting detailed changes in addition to those made during last month's four-hour first reading of the ordinance, director Dave Potter grew concerned the other parties involved — the Pebble Beach Company, the Pebble Beach Community Services District, the Carmel Area Wastewater District and the Independent Reclaimed Water Users Group — would not have time to respond. He urged a delay.

"I'd like to see closure on this with this board and not on some other board," he said, referring to the three new directors who will be sworn in next month to replace Erickson, chairman Zan Henson and director Kris Lindstrom. "But I think we need to do things properly."

The other directors agreed to put off final approval of the recycled water proposal and proceeded to make suggestions for changes to the ordinance and accompanying environmental study.

Sticking points

Lawyers for agencies which own and operate the wastewater treatment system told the board their clients are all striving for the same goal — reducing the use of drinking water for irrigation by improving the quality of recycled water — but they objected to several proposed revisions to the ordinance.

Among other complaints, they said a provision to allow just 28 days' emergency supply of potable water in case of a shutdown in the recycled water system was too restrictive.

Pebble Beach Co. attorney Tom Jamison decried the "onerous" requirements for people who purchase water entitlements, including deed restrictions limiting water use and public disclosure of individual water use records, which are considered private for most other Cal-Am customers.

Jim Nero, president of the Del Monte Forest Property Owners Association, encouraged approval of the recycling project and reminded the board the project is "totally funded by sales of the Pebble Beach Company entitlement at no cost to taxpayers, and all [the money from selling water] goes to public facilities. Not one penny goes to the Pebble Beach Company."

But Erickson pressed for additional measures to prevent the Pebble Beach Company from keeping any profits from the sale of its water. She also said she was afraid the district would fail to protect the public trust if it allowed too much reimbursement of expenses to the company or anyone else involved in the project, but she was assured the finances would be evaluated by an independent auditor.

Henson worried the company would use more of its unsold water than allowed.

"I'm concerned that for the entitlement not sold, there's

Neighbors fight P.B. vacation rentals

By REGAN CAREY

WHEN DIANE Ciesinski spoke in defense of her application for a short-term rental permit for her house on San Carlos Street in Del Monte Forest, she asserted, "I don't plan to turn it into a boarding house."

At a zoning administration hearing conducted by planning and building inspection services manager Mike Novo last Thursday, Ciesinski said she and her husband wanted to use the house themselves and also rent it. "We're doing it for our own flexibility," she said.

According to Del Monte Forest Property Owners Association president Jim Nero, residents are overwhelmingly opposed to short-term rentals in their neighborhood. He cited a petition signed by more than 100 people protesting a previous application for a short-term rental permit. In that case, when the applicants learned of the opposition, they withdrew their request. Nero said he would have liked to discuss the matter with the Ciesinskis before the hearing to try to reach a compromise, but was unsuccessful.

Listing loud parties, speeding and garbage in yards of other short-term rentals, Nero asked Novo to delay the matter and "balance the inconvenience of a short continuance with the gravity of creating a motel in a residential area."

David Stern, a 36-year resident of Pebble Beach, said he was not only representing himself but, "the 150 homeowners who want to know who their neighbors are." He called the idea of allowing another short-term rental "absurd." Neighbor Jeffrey Cuskey testified that, as the father of twin girls, he was concerned about the safety of his and other neighborhood children who ride their bikes in the area.

Only one speaker at the hearing favored the Ciesinskis' request. Cynthia Dusenbury said her previous employment with Monterey Bay Property Rentals, the agency the Ciesinskis are using, and the fact she has owned vacation rental property gave her a unique perspective. She said properties are actually better maintained as vacation rentals than by full-time residents, and likened the situation to dentistry, where "you only hear about the bad ones."

In the end Novo continued the matter until Dec. 11 to allow for research of past short-term rental complaints.

How Big a Mortgage?

Many financial advisors have a simple rule of thumb: When you're buying a home, take out the largest purchase money mortgage you can afford. The trouble with this rule is that it doesn't work for everybody—but it's worth considering. First, there is the obvious fact that the larger your monthly payment, the more interest you are paying and thus, the more interest you can deduct. Uncle Sam, in effect, is paying part of the way. (But don't forget that you need to pay out money in order to enjoy a deduction. You may want to reduce the hassle and simply minimize both the payment and the resulting deduction if security of ownership is more important to you than clever tax savings.) Second, though, there is the fact that the amount of deductible interest is determined by the size of your purchase money mortgage plus an additional $100,000. If you buy your home with a smaller mortgage, the amount of deductible interest you can pay—the amount of the loan that is covered by an annual tax deduction—is smaller. And there are two additional points to consider: It may be that some of your money would better serve you if it paid down other debt than if it reduced the size of your mortgage. But conversely, it may be that you will get a better return on your money by paying down your mortgage than you would if you invested that money elsewhere. To discuss these issues further, call Maureen at 622-2565 and visit her website at www.maureenmason.com.

FOCUS grants wishes of teachers

By REGAN CAREY

"EVERY ONE of us knows we live in a community that doesn't just pay lip service to the value of education. They put their money where their mouth is."

So said Carmel Unified School District Superintendent Marvin Biasotti in his remarks at the FOCUS Grants Presentation Nov. 19 in the library of Carmel Middle School. His words were proved true as the awards for 2003-2004 were announced — in total, the group gave out $125,145 to Carmel schools and teachers.

FOCUS (Friends of Carmel Unified Schools) was created in 1979 by parents and community leaders to provide supplementary funding to the school district. Teachers can apply to the group for grants to fund projects and classroom supplies not covered in the school district's budget. FOCUS awards small grants (less than $1,000) through out the year and large grants only once a year at the Grants Presentation ceremony.

This year's awards included $18,000 for K-12 after-school tutoring programs, $5,000 for the Habitat Project at Carmel Middle School, $16,150 for a new playground structure at River School and $10,000 for non-fiction library books, DVDs and CDs for Carmel High. FOCUS raises money throughout the year, and grants chair Jeannie Hale noted it received generous contributions from Quail Lodge and Wells Fargo Bank.

Hundred-dollar mini grants were also presented at the event. Teachers who attended could add a signed slip of paper to a basket for the chance to win funds for their classroom. Ten drawings punctuated the event as attendees snacked on a sumptuous spread of hor d' oeuvres before and after the large grants presentation.

no requirement for Pebble Beach to show the district how much water it's using on its benefited properties," he said. "And I don't see how anyone can determine that the overall limit has been adhered to unless there's some reporting."

P.B. Co. Executive Vice President Mark Stilwell responded that Pebble Beach follows all the rules set forth by the district.

After tinkering with the findings in the environmental study, the board voted unanimously to delay final adoption until its next meeting.

"This is the longest meeting I've ever been in on second reading and absolutely the most detailed go at findings," Potter said. "I think we've beat this document up pretty sincerely. Hopefully at the final reading we can get this document turned around."

The board is set to discuss the matter again Nov. 24 at 7 p.m. in the district conference room, 5 Harris Court, Bldg. G, Monterey, in Ryan Ranch.

needs something for a short time, why not permit it?"

But the commission's largess will be fruitless if the Kolars cannot obtain a water permit.

According to MPWMD Water Demand Manager Stephanie Pintar, the district has no provision for hardship cases. The only way the Kolars will be able to keep their illegal bathroom, even for a short time, is if the city parts with some of the meager water allocation it holds in reserve, she said.

THERE WAS a time when only traveling salesmen ate Thanksgiving dinner away from home in some lonely diner because restaurants didn't find it profitable to open.

Today many restaurants are packed on Thanksgiving with large family parties having as festive a time as if dining at home.

On the Monterey Peninsula, some restaurants are closed so their employees can be with their families, but many offering complete, traditional Thanksgiving dinners.

Be advised that nearly all require reservations, and a few are booked almost to capacity as of press time. Here are some choices:

Anton & Michel, San Carlos at Seventh, Carmel-by-the-Sea: Thanksgiving and regular menu served from 2 to 9 p.m.

Pacific's Edge Restaurant at Highlands Inn Park Hyatt Hotel, Carmel Highlands, has a special Thanksgiving dinner served from noon to 9 p.m. at $75 for adults, $35 for children.

California Market at Highlands Inn Park Hyatt Hotel, has a traditional Thanksgiving menu served from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. They also have a Thanksgiving dinner-to-go for six people for $175.

Merlot! Wine Country Bistro, Ocean Avenue between Lincoln and Monte Verde, Carmel-by-the-Sea, offers a traditional family Thanksgiving dinner served from noon to 10 p.m. for $22.95 per guest; children under 12, $10.95.

The Sardine Factory, 701 Wave St., Monterey, celebrates Thanksgiving with a five-course dinner: Adults, $29.95; seniors 62 and over $27.95 and children 12 and under $12.95; and children under 5 free.

Baum & Blume, 4 El Caminito Road, Carmel Valley Village, Carmel Valley is offering a take-home "Heartland Thanksgiving Dinner." But it must be ordered by Nov. 24, Prix Fixe for six people, $235 complete.

Forge in the Forest Restaurant, Fifth Avenue and Junipero, Carmel-by-the-Sea is having a traditional Thanksgiving dinner, buffet style, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. and are then switching over to their regular menu.

The Gem Restaurant, San Carlos between Ocean and Seventh, Carmel-by-the-Sea, is having a Thanksgiving Feast for $26.95 per person from 4 p.m. until closing animals for 4-H."

Mr. Ingram was born in Monterey and graduated from Monterey High, class of 1941. He served in the U.S. Navy in the South Pacific during World War II and, upon returning home, continued in the family business, Ingram Plastering, Inc. Mr. Ingram retired a year and a half ago, passing on the business to the fifth generation.

Mr. Ingram followed in the tradition first brought from Scotland by his great-grandfather, and his grandfather who came to Monterey in 1875 to restore the Pacheco House. His father, William N. Ingram, born in 1885 in New Monterey, created most of the decorative cast plaster still visible both inside and outside the State Theater in downtown Monterey. Opened in 1926 as the Golden State Theater, the structure was praised for the quality of its ornamental plaster. The elder Ingram also worked on the restoration of the Carmel Mission in 1932 and on the old San Carlos Hotel, a downtown Monterey landmark until its demolition in 1983.

Mr. Ingram worked with Carmel Mission curator, Sir Harry Downie, on further restoration of the Mission. In the 1970s he restored its front in a soft gold color that matches the weathered tones of the 18th century building. With his sons, Mr. Ingram restored its bell tower in 1991.

"Color plaster was his specialty. He was really good at seeing colors and mixing them to look really old and authentic," Viales said.

Mr. Ingram married Marjorie June Wermuth 52 years ago. His wife survives him, as do his children, Marjorie Viales, William, James, Paul, Mary Martin, Patricia Scardina and John, all of Carmel Valley; and Christopher of Pacific Grove; his sisters, Mary Millington of Pacific Grove, Alice Brown of Monterey and Kate Ambrosio of Carmel; 20 grandchildren; three great-grandchildren and numerous nieces and nephews.

He was preceded in death by his son, Robert, in 2002; and sister, Anne Smith, in 2000.

Mr. Ingram was fond of playing the harmonica. He enjoyed the outdoors, fishing at his cabin in the San Clemente Rancho in Carmel Valley, spending time with his grandchildren, gardening and following sports.

With his son, William, he attended the recent California International Airshow in Salinas, and it proved "a fabulous night for them both," recalled Viales.

Vigil services for Mr. Ingram will take place at 7 p.m. Friday, Nov. 21 in the Carmel Mission Basilica. A mass of the resurrection will be celebrated at 10 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 22 at the mission, followed by a gathering for family and friends at Hidden Valley Music Seminars in Carmel Valley Village.

Contributions may be sent to the Alzheimer's Association in honor of his wife, to Hospice House, or a charity of the donor's choice.

the California Highway Patrol. The car rolled several times before landing on the beach.

Carmel Regional Fire Ambulance paramedics David Jedinak and Graham Evans arrived to find state park rangers on the roadway near the accident scene and were among the first to reach the men and their crumpled car.

"They were both out of the car and were in a lot of discomfort, with scrapes and bruises and bleeding from the head, but they seemed to be in pretty good condition in terms of what had just occurred," Jedinak said, adding that he found Payne and Sloan sitting beside their Honda and that both were able to talk about the accident.

But stabilizing and treating the patients was complicated by the presence of a very scared dog, according to Jedinak.

"There was this beautiful little pit bull — they kept calling her 'Mama' — and she was all over the place, running around, and the whole time we were working on these guys the dog was being overprotective," he said, adding that Payne and Sloan also kept trying to calm the dog. "We finally got a firefighter to leash her up, but she presented quite an interesting situation, trying to render patient care and deal with a dog who was snipping at everyone."

Another dog fled after the accident, according to Jedinak.

He called for a CHP helicopter to hoist the men but soon learned the chopper was out of service. About an hour after the accident, two Monterey County Sheriff's Office Search and Rescue crews arrived and rappelled down the hillside, strapped the men in stokes baskets and lifted them to safety.

Before being loaded into awaiting ambulances, Payne and Sloan told CHP officers their names and, when asked where he lived, one of them shouted, "I told you! I live in my van!"

The men were taken to Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula and treated for moderate injuries.

"They should go out and buy lottery tickets," commented one highway patrol officer at the scene.

existing footprint to protect native plant habitat on the rest of his land — the same reason the commission ordered nearby resident Robert Feduniak to remove a three-hole golf course that has been in his front yard since 1985.

Smith and Feduniak argue their lots don't qualify as "environmentally sensitive habitat" — which requires special protection under the California Coastal Act — because they were overrun with Hottentot fig iceplant, a South African import widely planted along the coast to halt erosion.

The commission's requirement that Smith dramatically cut the size of his house wasn't done according to the law or based on reliable evidence, and amounts to discrimination because other homes in the neighborhood weren't held to the same standard, according to Smith's suit.

"As far as I'm concerned, they are guilty of all of it," Smith told The Pine Cone.

But the commission's view is that development in the sand dunes along 17 Mile Drive and in the Asilomar area of Pacific Grove must be carefully controlled to protect native plants such as Tidestrom's lupine and Menzies wallflower.

In his lawsuit, Smith also accuses the commission of violating the Separation of Powers Clause of the California Constitution, because it is controlled by the Legislature but wields powers that belong to the executive branch.

That issue is currently before the California Supreme Court in a case brought by an Orange County environmental group, the Marine Forests Society. The decision on the constitutionality of the coastal commission is expected in early 2004.

brand-name products.

Each year county investigators bust three or four established stores selling counterfeits, and often these goods can be traced to distributors in Los Angeles. In the past the Monterey County D.A. has worked with the L.A. County District Attorney to prosecute them. Holett likened counterfeiting to drug trafficking, with a street seller, a middleman and an importer, and said the aim of investigators is to find the source. Holett cited that as the reason Anwar was ordered to save all his receipts — so if he is caught selling fakes again, they can be easily traced.

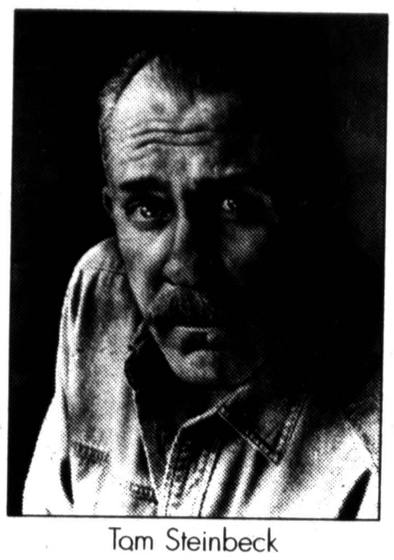
IF YOU missed meeting Thomas Steinbeck when he was on book tour earlier this year, you have another chance. The author of "Down to a Soundless Sea" and son of John Steinbeck is returning to The Thunderbird Bookshop at 4 p.m. this Saturday, Nov. 22 to discuss his work.

We hailed the publication of his first book as a true literary event. His prose is eloquent and flows as well as his father's ever did, and the subjects of the short stories and a novella that make up the book are all of the Central Coast, of which Thomas Steinbeck has an intimate knowledge, having spent many of his formative years here.



Tom Steinbeck

His is one of the finest books we have ever had the pleasure to review. Do yourself a favor and meet Tom Steinbeck at the booksigning this weekend. His book will make a distinguished gift for literary friends.

F&C Publishers of Hollywood. The poems are for children, adults and "anyone looking for positive poetry." Some of the poems are tributes to his family and friends, about American patriotism and tribute poems for educators. Two short stories conclude the book.

Bookworks, 667 Lighthouse Ave., Pacific Grove, invites you to a reading by Rick of some of his uplifting work from 2 to 4 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 6. There will be a wine and cheese reception, live music and a few surprises. Just for this special reading, the book will be priced at $12.95, or two for $20. A portion of the proceeds from book sales will be donated to the music program of Del Rey Woods School.

"I want to help increase the public awareness of keeping music in the schools throughout Monterey County," he said. The booksigning and reception are free. For information, call Bookworks at 373-2242.

"CALIFORNIA POEMS" by Grace Hibbard with photographs by Joan Barrett, is the second photography book published by Barrett. The first, "California Spring," is a wildflower anthology with the photos keyed to poems by Robinson Jeffers, Dora Hagemeyer, Mary Austin, and the like.

"California Poems," 54 in all, are written to illustrate Joan Barrett's stunning photography of our Monterey Peninsula beauty spots: ferns in Big Sur forest, bougainvillea at Mission San Carlos, dawn at Pescadero Point, aloe plants along the shoreline of Pacific Grove, lupine along the Pacific Coast highway, and so much more.

Hibbard's poems are quite lovely and almost echo a time long past. One of the shorter poems, "Sunrise on Monterey Bay — the Morning Star" reads

Rose-pink along the eastern hills,
Reflected on the bright'ning sea.
A sudden flame, burning all stars
Save one alight o'er cypress tree.

This short poem illustrates Barrett's photograph, "Dawn at Pescadero Point" on the 17 Mile Drive in Pebble Beach. It is hazy with pink morning sky flowing almost seamlessly into a pink sea with a dark cypress hovering over the shoreline.

The 54-page hardcover, was published by Park Place Publications of Pacific Grove. It sells for $30 in selected local bookshops.

'The Dining Room' at Magic Circle a superbly crafted evening of entertainment

By STEPHEN R. HARRIS

"THE DINING Room," a delightful comedy penned by A.R. Gurney, opened last weekend at The Magic Circle Center in Carmel Valley, and I'm pleased to report that director and cast combined to create all essentials necessary to provide the audience with a warm and memorable evening.

theater review

Although the sources I consulted are strangely silent on the subject, it is obvious that, at least as evidenced in this piece, Gurney owes more than a tip of his hat to Thornton Wilder, whose ground-breaking "The Skin of Our Teeth" and "The Long Christmas Dinner" provided the stylistic launching pad Gurney employs to good use. However, to his credit, Gurney goes a stretch beyond the linear continuity of Wilder, creating a pastiche of moments that break the unity of time, like suits of cards jumbled by shuffling, and lays them out for us on the dining table as moments related, irrespective of time, by the social institution of the dining room as it evolved and dissolved in American culture over the past century. (For those unfamiliar with Gurney, his other works for the stage include the puppy-play, "Sylvia," and the ever popular three-hankie slice of treacle-tart, "Love Letters.")

Directed by Elsa Con and performed by fine professionals, this tour de force effort is an actor's dream (and a director's nightmare), each playing a plethora of roles in varying generations and ages, from temper-testing toddlers to cynical "sages" of advanced years.

With a striking set design by Laura Cote, and R. J. Wofford II contributing his always au point lighting effects, here ably assisted by Leslie Krautkraemer and Laura Cote (busy lady, she), credited for costumes and props, all technical aspects of production complement the on-stage performances to create a superbly crafted evening of entertainment.

All performances are worthy of praise, but some moments are deserving of special mention. Richard Boynton is steady throughout, but rises to the bait brilliantly in portrayals that verge on farce, creating cartoonesque characters, where required, that stretch the fabric of the piece, adding another layer of desirable complexity.

Delightfully bratty

Laura Cote is grand, her facial expressions, timing and line readings impeccable and amusing. She (along with Tim Hart) provide the glue that holds the piece together. Dawn Flood, delightfully bratty as a child, will tear your heart out as an elderly mother whose mind has betrayed her memory — a remarkable moment I shall ever remember.

Fred Herro and Elizabeth Miles each contribute considerably with their multiple characterizations, combining efforts, literally under the table, in a wonderfully silly scene of near seduction that first brings the audience to snicker, then leaves us in stitches.

What can one say of Tim Hart? A long-time veteran of Pacific Repertory, where, like a utility infielder in baseball, he constantly contributes multiple character performances. This show being obviously right up his alley, Hart consistently and brilliantly assumes characters whose personas seem undeserving of our compassion — including several grumpy old men — and yet finds a hook within the portrayal that not only humanizes but exposes the nerves within the character and the audience as well, by underplaying where lesser players would seize an obvious opportunity and play over the top. Always a joy to watch a pro at work!

In summary, this is not a show for those who need their pictures painted for them, for the audience works along with cast to create a cohesive whole out of the scenes presented on stage. A rich and rewarding experience awaits playgoers in the Carmel Valley at The Magic Circle Center.

I fully intend to see the production again if I can obtain a seat. They were SRO last Saturday evening and deservedly so. Accordingly, reservations are more than suggested, and may well be mandatory.

■ "The Dining Room" plays through Dec. 14. For tickets, call 659-1108.

THIS IS not a traveling dog show passing through town, but a Carmel Beach daily walking group. Clearly, some dogs are to the photo shoot born.

Led by Andee Burleigh, the personification of loving patience, the band of beach wanderers are all Carmelites.

Zoe, 15, on the rock, and Amanda, 6, sitting in front of Zoe, are Burleighs. Smiling Gretchen Lisser, 9, is a German shepherd, and alert Apollo Gracie, the Doberman at the far right, is a mere pup of seven months.

Zoe, a Chihuahua-pug-Boston terrier mix, is the car seat monitor to and from the beach. A stern look from Zoe when any of the other three become too rambunctious, chastens them into polite car behavior. But on the beach she's a lot of fun, as carefree and peppy as the others.

Amanda, a clumber spaniel, has an investigative nose, and wanders far afield from the group to seek out that certain something her olfactory nerves detect. At a call from Mom Andee, she drops her research and rejoins the group in a trice.

Gretchen always carries a toy (seen to the right on the rock) because she needs something to bury in the sand to distract her from biting salty waves. She places the toy on the sand and digs patterns around it, varying the designs artistically.

Puppy Apollo has a beautiful sleek coat of chocolate and rust colors. His favorite interests at the beach are kelp, and his girlfriend Molly, a charming golden retriever.

As the four clamber into the car for the homeward drive, we note that Mom's license plate reads Divine K-9.

were missing.

The piece depicted the faces of a man and woman peering over a child, was 21 inches tall and 16 inches wide, and quite heavy, according to Frasier.

She said acrylic pieces are popular targets for thieves, and galleries all over the nation are regularly hit.

Several pieces by acrylic sculptor Frederick Hart disappeared from the Hanson Gallery in downtown Carmel between 1998 and 2000 in a rash of thefts that targeted victims throughout California and in Colorado.

Frasier also recalled an incident when she worked for Fingerhut Gallery in which thieves smashed a window after closing time and made off with a sculpture.

"That's why we take our acrylics out of the windows at night," she said. "Because people were smashing the windows and taking them."

Melton said the police have few leads at this point but hope someone who saw them might come forward. The suspects might have been faking their South American accents, he added.

OPINION

Editorial

Defending a free society

LAST WEEK this newspaper reported a story that was right under everybody's nose, but which hardly anybody in the news media had noticed: There are no security checks for airport workers in the U.S., beyond an initial background check when they are hired.

This means that after your suitcase has been thoroughly searched for explosives and weapons, it becomes the responsibility of baggage handlers who weren't screened at all when they arrive for work. It means that after you have been relieved of your nail scissors and knitting needles at the security checkpoint, you enter an environment where thousands of people can come and go without so much as passing through a metal detector or having their briefcases, purses, backpacks or toolkits opened. Airline and airport employees can't keep their jobs if they have criminal records or show overt terrorist sympathies. But if a worker's background appears to be clean and he stays out of serious trouble, he is simply trusted not to try to blow up an airplane.

This glaring chasm in airport security is an invitation to terrorists comparable to the lax situation that prevailed before Sept. 11, when the country's skies were a wide open invitation to hijackers. Somewhere, even as you read this, remnants of Al Qaeda or angry members of as-yet-unknown terror groups are plotting another attack on the United States. Two years ago, we learned a hard lesson in their evil cleverness, and that there is nothing they won't stoop to for the pleasure of killing Americans.

Obviously, gaping holes in domestic security should be closed. But at what cost? And which ones? At some large airports, it would be very expensive to set up passenger-style security stations for the many thousands of workers who support round-the-clock operations. The hesitancy of Transportation Security Administration officials to establish behind-the-scenes security zones at JFK, ORD and LAX is understandable, from a purely financial point of view. Also, they say the vastness of such places makes it impossible to guard against all threats. Should money be spent on daily searches of people who've passed F.B.I. background checks, officials ask, or would it be better spent beefing up patrols on the borders with Canada and Mexico, guarding chemical plants and checking air cargo for explosives? America presents tens of thousands of "soft" targets that are easy to attack and impossible to defend in any comprehensive way because of their sheer numbers.

This dilemma is a reminder that the answer to terrorism is not to turn our nation into an armed camp. The United States is the world's most open society and should not — indeed, cannot — change into something else because of the massacres at the World Trade Center, the Pentagon and a Pennsylvania farm.

Instead, the answer is twofold:

- better intelligence at home and abroad, leading to disruption of terror groups wherever they're found, and
- peace in the Middle East.

Passenger security checks at airports are important because they can help prevent hijackings, but also because they give the public the confidence to fly — a vital factor in the country's improving economy. As the economy picks up, and as more tax dollars flow to Washington, Congress and the White House should be encouraged to spend that money stopping terrorists before they get anywhere near our airports.

Also, President Bush should insist that the Palestinians and the Israelis figure out a way to divide the land they've been fighting over since 1949.

Then, it won't matter who gets his hands on your suitcase after you've checked it.

Golden Bough for handicapped

Dear Editor,

I wasn't happy to hear the news that the Forest Theater will be socked with a $464,000 upgrade to satisfy the threat of more ADA lawsuits, and I am getting tired of hearing accounts of merchants, and eventually taxpayers, getting stuck with these nasty surprises.

I have a quick cure that might satisfy all concerned. I feel sorry for people who have handicaps but, as our former mayor said in one of his inimical movies, "A man's got to know his limitations."

So here's my suggestion: I am not sure, but I'll bet, the Golden Bough theater has been ADA proofed and it would be a lot cheaper and maybe even practical to hold one performance of each offering from the Forest Theater in the Golden Bough for handicapped folks.

After reading all of the "improvements" listed in the Pine Cone it seems to me the atmosphere and quaintness of The Forest Theater would be somewhat jaded with all these changes.

Don Soule, Carmel Valley

'Egregious waste of taxpayers' money'

Dear Editor,

The recent storm water utility tax election cost the City of Carmel $33,517.22 over a period of time including postage, printings, mailings and payments to Harris & Associates which administered the election and tabulated the results. After this egregious waste of the taxpayers' money, Councilman Dick Ely was reported in the Pine Cone asking whether it was possible to "go back after a certain period of time and ask again." Rather than squandering more tax dollars on a losing issue (only 861 voters supported the imposition of the tax) you would hope the council would now spend its time exploring other possible sources of revenue and eliminating similar wasteful expenditures.

Robert C. Clifford, Carmel

Making town easier to visit

Dear Editor,

I recently visited your city for the first time and I think it is the most interesting place in Monterey County to walk around.

However, there are two changes that would make it nicer for visitors like me.

The first is to make the sidewalks more level and smooth. I nearly tripped several times while walking. It would be more enjoyable to walk past your stores and trees if I did not have to spend so much time looking down at the sidewalks.

The second change involves your bus stops, which are important to me because I don't own a car, so I rode the bus to visit. The bus stop signs should be a bit larger and should state which routes stop there.

In other parts of Monterey County, the signs are visible and list the route numbers. When I first ride the bus into a new place and want to return home, the most challenging thing is to find where to wait for the bus and to be sure the route I want stops there.

I enjoyed visiting Carmel, and if the city made these changes, I would have a stronger desire to return.

Chris Flescher, Salinas

'Beyond the call to duty'

Dear Editor,

Wednesday began badly, as I came across a cat hit by a car on Atherton Avenue and obviously in pain.

I ran and banged on the door of the nearest home, and Mr. and Mrs. Hays answered. The day got better as people stopped to keep traffic from hitting the cat again, we got him off the road and to help.

When I stopped by the Hays' home on Thursday to check on the cat, I found he had a chip implanted, his name was Kenny, but was no longer with the owner identified on the chip. His pelvis is cracked in three places and he has an injured paw.

Mrs. Hays was tempting him with fresh salmon, but he was having none of it. When I offered to split the vet's fee with the Hayses, they suggested I send a donation to the Carmel Police Department which I learned had transported Kenny to the veterinarian and also gave a donation to the vet. This would never have happened in the town where I used to live.

I sent my check off today.

I want to thank all those who stopped to help and who offered money toward the vet's bill. I want to thank Mr. & Mrs. Hays for sheltering Kenny, The Crossroads veterinary hospital for drastically reducing its fee, but most of all, Carmel P.D. and Cindi, who went way above and beyond the call of duty.

We live in a special town, folks. We are indeed blessed.

Sue Jones, Carmel

"Carmel Legends"

It would have been funny if it hadn't happened so often. Upon being introduced to somebody new, FRANK LLOYD would hear, "Oh, so you're Frank Lloyd, right?" "No," Frank would reply wearily. "Wrong! Mr. Wright makes building. I make words." And make words he did for more than 50 years, many of which have been preserved in the archives of Carmel. His father was Chairman of the Botany Department at Magill University in Montreal, and his first exposure to Carmel came at age four when the senior Lloyd accepted an assignment here for he Smithsonian Institution. Later Frank attended Magill and in 1933 became a sports reporter on the Monterey Gazette. During the next few years he alternated between Montreal and Carmel, finally settling her in '35. for a time he was a contractor, building 12 cottages in Carmel. then he bought a fishing boat and became a commercial fisherman. Next he was Editor of The Pine Cone for 5 years; then an electrician in the shipyards of Sausalito; sports editor of the Santa Cruz Sentinel; proprietor of an electrical business in Cannery row; and founder of a weekly paper in Watsonville. In the 70's he became an outstanding member of the City Council, where he stood for the traditions and ideals that made this little town famous. Today there's a quiet bench overlooking the sea at the corner of Scenic Drive and Santa Lucia, and on it is a small plaque that says this is the "FRANK LLOYD BENCH." Walk around Scenic some day soon, sit on that bench, look out across the Bay, and reflect on the career of this Renaissance Man. Less than 100 yards to the south is the only seaside house designed by Frank Lloyd Wright. The two are still inseparable.

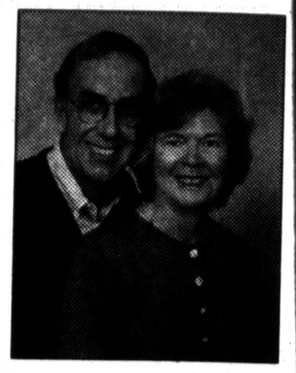
CONDO MARKET HUMS



House Talk
By Paul & Nellie Brocchini

THE CONDO market on the Monterey Peninsula continues to be strong. The Market Barometer, a measure of the percentage of listings in escrow, jumped to over 40 percent during the quarter, its highest reading since July 2000.

Dollar and unit volume practically duplicated last year's numbers. There were 74 closed transactions this year, a gain of three sales over last year. Dollar volume was down a shade to $32,640,000, still a healthy number.

Median sales prices were up in six markets and down in three. The big winner in prices was Monterey, where the median sales price jumped from $272,000 last year to $405,000 this year. The largest drop was in Carmel Valley, where the median sales price declined to $417,500 from $556,250.

These numbers are subject to wide swings due to the small size of the market. Carmel Valley is especially volatile as the median sales price depends on the mix of product sold. This year half of the 22 units sold were at Hacienda Carmel, dragging down the median price level. There were numerous Hacienda sales last year, too, but the median was pushed up by a strong showing at expensive Carmel Valley Ranch.

Properties are selling a bit faster this year than last. The number of days on the market declined in seven markets and increased in only two. Strong demand, reflected by the high market barometer reading, should keep the condo market humming for the near future.

Are brought to mind as you enter the huge flower-filled patio suitable for large parties. Then open the magical front door and suddenly, as if on wings of eagles, you will be transported to a magnificent nest that soars above the entire Monterey Bay below. The view is absolutely beyond compare. But the house is even better. It has been totally remodeled and professionally landscaped. There are guest rooms separate from the main house, an enormous deck, a wine cellar and even a custom-built dog-house on the large lot. This home is very private and quiet. Did I mention the amazing view?
